This dramatic residence at the eponymous Cass Gilbert building blends the best qualities of loft and prewar styles. The elegant and spacious kitchen is open to the living room, which has plenty of space for both a large dining area and an open sitting area. The wide and long entry gallery gives a more formal feeling to the loft style living room, and is an excellent place for mixing furniture styles and displaying art. Air conditioning units have beautiful custom millwork enclosures with brass registers. Polished nickel faucets and egg shaped doorknobs lend a prewar air. Large casement windows and eleven foot ceilings give each room excellent proportions. The layout is flexible, with several multipurpose rooms.
